

Arcadia University Recognized for 'Study Abroad Plus'

Inside Higher Education, in a May 11 story, described Arcadia University's new Undergraduate Curriculum as "Study Abroad Plus," noting that Arcadia and several others "have added requirements that could be described as study abroad-plus, to be fulfilled either through study abroad or another form of experiential, off-campus learning."

Reporter Elizabeth Redden wrote, "Arcadia University, which is known for its study abroad programs, is requiring a Global Connections Experience and Reflection as part of its revamped core curriculum, also launched this academic year. Students can fulfill the requirement through studying abroad, studying away domestically, or taking a course at the Pennsylvania campus designated as offering a 'sustained cross-cultural experience.' A course called 'Hispanic Experience in Philadelphia,' for instance, requires students to spend two hours a week tutoring elderly residents in English." The article quoted Dr. Ellen Skilton-Sylvester, Associate Professor of Education and Director of Global Connections at Arcadia, about study away domestic options.

President Jerry Greiner was quoted, "We really were quite intentional when we created multiple ways for students to do this. We are working very hard to integrate what we are doing in terms of global/international with what we are considering global/local."
